Flight Tried as Cure for Whooping Cough

ZUMBROTA, Minn. — (U.P.) — Lieut. Cmdr. M. P. Horn of Zumbrota was pilot of a navy plane which took a 3-year-old German girl 11,000 feet above Bremen in an attempt to cure her of whooping cough.

Navy and U. S. officials authorized the flight after German doctors said a change of air and air pressure might ease her condition.

The girl, Jutta Mayerle, said she felt "fine" when the plane landed and she was able to eat a full meal for the first time in 10 days. However, there was no immediate medical "opinion as to whether the flight helped decisively.
