Traffic Death Toll Declines in Quarter

Traffic accidents caused 148 deaths in Wisconsin during the first quarter of 1951, compared to 214 victims in the same period last year, the state motor vehicle department said Tuesday.

Thirty-four pedestrians were killed during the period this year, the lowest death toll in the past 12 years. Fifty-five of the victims were pedestrians in the first four months of 1950, the department said.

TIP O' THE MORNING: "Jezebel" sounds like another hit for Frankie Laine. Fits his style perfectly.

Development of musical interest at Oakwood, at the Wisconsin School for Girls near Oregon, has reached such a point that four entries in the Evansville school music festival received stars, entitling them to take part in the State Solo-Ensemble festival here on May 12.

Julia Benoy Landmark, Oakwood's music instructor, entered the girls' glee club and 12 vocal soloists and ensembles in the Evansville event. The chorus and seven sole-ensemble entries received first-division ratings. A duet, a trio, and two soloists won stars from the judges.

This was the fifth time in Mrs. Landmark's six years at Oakwood that the glee club has received top rating.

Ethel C. Brubaker, superintendent of the school, has encouraged the girls to take part in forensic, dramatic, and music events for which most Wisconsin schools are eligible.

"For many of the girls at Oakwood," Mrs. Landmark said, "this has been their first experience in music festival participation.

"With the assurance that comes with success in any field, many of the Oakwood students should return to their homes and communities, or go on to new places, ready to add to the music of the locality."

RECITALS: Patricia Griffen Hazard and Jean Leonard, piano students in the University of Wisconsin music school, will give their graduate recitals this week.

Mrs. Hazard will play at 8 tonight and Miss Leonard at 8 p. m. Friday. Both recitals will be in Music hall, and both will be free to the public.

Mrs. Hazard's program:

"Two Choral Preludes," Bach; "Prelude, Choral, and Fugue," Franck;

"Kreisleriana," Schuman; "Intermezzo in B flat Minor," Brahms; "Rhapsody in E flat Major," Brahms;

"Sonatine," Ravel; "The Fountain," Ravel; "Bourree Fantasque," Chabrier.

Miss Leonard will play:

"Prelude, Aria, and Finale," Franck; "Variations on a Theme by Diabelli," Beethoven;

"Mephisto Waltz," Liszt; "Toccata, Opus 11, "Prokofieff.

IN NEW YORK: Names familiar to Madison which appear in the ads for Broadway shows included:

Melvyn Douglas, former Madison stock company star, in "The Little Blue Light," ANTA playhouse;

Dennis King, seen here in "I Married An Angel" and "A Doll's House," in "Billy Budd" Biltmore theater;

Paul Lukas, here in "Watch on the Rhine," in "Call Me Madam," Imperial theater;

Richard Waring, here with Ethel Berrymore in "The Corn Is Green," in "Gramercy Ghost," Morosco theater;

Charlotte Greenwood, last here in "I Remember Mama," in "Out of This World," Century theater;

Richard Whorf, a several times visitor with the Lunts, in "Season in the Sun," Cort theater;

Fredric March, University of Wisconsin graduate, in "The Autumn Garden," Cornet theater;

Uta Hagen, daughter of Prof. Oskar Hagen, in "The Country Girl," Lyceum theater;

Yul Brynner, star of "The Lute Song" at the Parkway, in "The King and I," St. James theater;

Jose Ferrer, the Iago of Paul Robeson's "Othello," in "Twentieth Century," Fulton theater.

MOVIE NEWS: Edith Gwynn, State Journal Hollywood correspondent, writes . . .

"Stone walls do not a prison make"—nor, in our verbiage, does star billing necessarily make a star. Meaning that neither Jeff Chandler nor Howard Keel has yet achieved star-status in the advertised sense—but each has managed to steal his last picture or two. Particularly Chandler, who walks away with "Bird of Paradise" in rugged style. Tall and handsome (yet not too "pretty"), Keel can add his grand singing voice to other charms, putting him and Chandler among the really safe predictions as top ticket-sellers before 1951 goes to rest!

PREVIEW TIPS:— "The Great Caruso" from Metro is great, great, great! A real entertainment delight in handsome Technicolor that tells the life story of the immortal tenor with fidelity to the human drama of his life. And Mario Lanza, on the screen nearly every minute of the running time, sings the opera arias in a way that would have provoked Caruso himself to admiration . . . In "Goodbye, My Fancy", Joan Crawford proves herself as adroit in brittle comedy as in those tough babes of the world roles, but the comedy-drama itself is slight and somewhat dull . . . Loretta Young in "Half Angel" isn't even half good.

Judy Canova will have just a few days off between finishing her current "Oklahoma Annie" and the start of her next, "A WAC from Walla Walla." This is not to be confused (but how can you help it?) with "A WAC In His Life" which stars June Haver and Bill Lundigan.

Those out-loud hassels between Deanna Durbin and sponse Charles David can be heard all the way to here.

Dan Dailey's been dating Virginia Grey; D. Dailey's been dating Peggy Lee; Dan D's been dating—well, he's been awfully busy lately!

Candy Toxton (it says here) will make some records along with husband Mel Torme. Please not we didn't say they'd be singing. . . . Rumors won't down that Mrs. Jerome Kern (widow of the great composer) is about to marry young singer, George Byron.

Eastern spies say the stork's on his way to the Henry Fonda-Susan Blanchard castle.

Don't hold your breath till the proposed movie-starring of Katherine Cornell in a filmnization of Florence Nightingale takes place.

Of course, if la Cornell is ever going to immortalize herself on celluloid after the countless offers she turned down, this vehicle would be a natural. Besides, it's "later than she thinks!" Too—a story based on the Nightingale's life happens to be on the agenda for at least one other star who already has proved her movie box-office worth.

Lilly Pons has been taking ballet-dancing lessons like mad for months—along with a bunch of teen-agers. Just for her own amusement.

Carmen Miranda and Dave Sebastian are next on the list of Hollywoodians set to adopt a baby. They expect to take a six-month-old boy into their house.

Jesse Lasky, Jr., son of the famed producer, has finished his writing stint on "The Rosary" at Metro and now goes to Columbia for further script chores.

Sam Fuller, the smartie who turned out "Steel Helmet" for peanuts and paralyed it into one of the big boxoffice hits of the year, has grabbed off a contract at 20th Century-Fox.

Russ Pyre Begins 36th Year with State Journal

Russell B. Pyre, Wisconsin State Journal city hall reporter and columnist, began his 36th year with The State Journal Tuesday.

Pyre is the oldest member of The State Journal's editorial staff in years of service.

He writes a Sunday column "Hook, Line and Sinker," and compiles Sunday's "Our Town" column.
