TIP O' THE MORNING: Don't be surprised if Dean Jagger, who played Brigham Young on the screen, shows up on Broadway in a musical about the great Mormon.

Great music played and sung beautifully by the Madison String Sinfonia and the Milton college choir delighted an audience in West high school Tuesday night.

It was one of the last concerts of a busy season, and left behind it a feeling of great satisfaction.

The Sinfonia is directed by Marie A. Endres and the choir by Bernhardt H. Westlund; they shared the baton in joint numbers.

Both had trained their groups to nearly perfect states. The strings played and voices sang with precision.

But instead of the ostentation which too often marks and mars such precision, these conductors placed their emphasis upon grace, smoothness, and fidelity to tone and spirit.

The concert opened with a finely textured playing of Bach's "Prelude in E Minor," and continued with "Mein Jesu," in which the cellos starred. Both were Stokowski arrangements. The first section ended with the allegro from Bach's E-major violin concerto, a group of eight playing the solo part with considerable polish.

Of the chorus' unaccompanied selections, outstanding were a rich performance of "Jesu, Priceless Treasure," a lifting one of Berge's "Brazilian Psalm," and a quiet version of the spiritual "Were You There," sung as an encore.

With the orchestra, the chorus sang Bach's "Cantata No. 150" and "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring." In both, the organizations complemented each other with a natural and easy skill.

Other works which pleased the audience and exhibited the expert training of the groups included Randall Thompson's "Howl Ye by the Choir and Fiddlers," by the orchestra.

Individual performances deserving mention were Kenneth Babcock's and Mary Wahl's incidental solos in "How Fair Is Thy Face" and "Were You There," respectively; Dan Goldsmith's rapid-fire accuracy on the bass in the Bach cantata, and Roger McIlvree's trumpet playing in "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring."

ART SHOW: "New Reality," an exhibition of 36 paintings by nine city and campus artists, has opened at Hillier foundation, where it will be on view until June 5. Its sponsors believe it is the first extensive show of non-objective abstractions ever held in Wisconsin.
