Little Hollywood Players Revive Oldstyle 'Barroom' Melodrama

Hisses for the villain and cheers for the hero will be in order at Club Hollywood Wednesday, Oct. 24, when the "Little Hollywood Players" present their first play—"Ten Nights in a Barroom."

The players will limit their efforts to old-time melodramas, with a revival of the old theater policy of "vaudeville between the acts" as an added feature. Actors will join guest artists in doing everything from music to magic.

Paul F. Hunter will portray the famous drunkard, Joe Morgan, in "Ten Nights," with Bruce Kanitz as the villainous Simon Slade. Hunter has had leading parts in many Madison Theater Guild shows, and Kanitz is known for his work with Wisconsin Players, Haresfoot club, and Port Players.

Virginia Lee Rauch, who was in the Guild's "Dinner at Eight," will portray the villain's wife. Marilyn Morgan, another former campus performer, will appear as a 12-year-old girl. Also in the cast will be Rod MacDonald, Edwin Morgan, and Ken Jordan, Madison; George Bird, Green Lake, and Glenn Potter, Milwaukee.

Morgan is the troupe's technical director. Under his supervision the Hollywood stage has been enlarged and rearranged to permit use of scenery, including an old-fashioned front curtain complete with advertising notices. The company plans to present the melodramas on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday nights, with a change of bill every two weeks. After each show, the patrons will be invited to stay for dancing.

TIP O' THE MORNING: You won't be hearing Jim Lawler longer on WKOW. Only Madison winner of The State Journal's listener poll last year, Jim is going into television at Columbus, O.

Players, Inc., probably will greet a capacity audience when they present William Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" at 8 p. m. Thursday in Edgewood auditorium. Some tickets are still available at the Chocolate shop and at Edgewood college, however. If any remain, they will go on sale at the door just before the performance.

The touring company's production was directed by Walter Kerr, who also directed the recent George Abbott show, "Touch and Go." Sets and lighting were designed by James Waring, stage director of "Faith of Our Fathers," the Washington, D. C., sesquicentennial extravaganza.

TOP TUNES: Three listings of best-sellers in popular music in Madison are now being broadcast each week—each from a different source.

One set, aired by WISC on "The Big Eight" Saturdays, comes from Pla-Mor; another, heard on "10 Top Tunes" via WFOV Sundays, is from Automatic Hostess; and a third, on "Big Eight" on WFOV Saturdays, is from Victor Music Co.

Using a scoring system which proved successful when The State Journal compiled its own "10 top tunes" several years ago, we come up with this composite list of the first eight on the best-seller list: ONE, "Cold, Cold Heart."
TWO, "Sin."
THREE, "Because of You."
FOUR, "Undecided."
FIVE, "I Got Ideas."
SIX, "Down Yonder."
SEVEN, "Sentimental Journey."
EIGHT, "I Ran All the Way Home."

Also in the running (but not in this order) were "Detour," "Too Young," "I Won't Cry Any More," "A Kiss to Build a Dream On," "Longing for You," "Mixed Emotions," "If Tears Were Pennies," "Kissing Bug Boogie," and "For All We Know."

FROM RADIO ROW: Charlie Hanson, formerly with WFOV, is handling Madison programs on WIBU and WWCF nightly, Monday through Friday. David Wright, heard Thursday and Friday nights on WFOV, won a Billboard award as "the South's youngest disc jockey" when he was 17 and on a station at Charleston, N. C. Two years before that, he was singing and dancing in a night club.
