Bundle, Label Christmas Cards, Yule Mailers Urged

Madison mailers of Christmas greeting cards were urged by Postmaster J. A. Wirtka Tuesday to bundle and label them.

Red and white labels reading "All for Out-of-Town Delivery" and "All for Local Delivery" have been distributed by carriers and others are available at the post-office and branch stations, Wirtka said.

Patrons can help expedite their greeting cards if they will separate those for local delivery from those for out-of-town delivery and arrange them so the addresses all face one way, he declared. Then they should be tied in bundles and labeled.

If printed labels are not available, Wirtka suggested that senders prepare their own, with the same lettering.

The postmaster reminded patrons again that "it costs only one cent more to mail your cards first class, at 3 cents."

"First class cards may be sealed and contain any personal message," he explained.

"If the addressee has moved, the letter will be forwarded or returned if the return address is shown in the upper left hand corner. If sent third class, with 2 cents postage, it can not be sealed; it must not be forwarded or returned; it must not contain writing; and is handled as circular matter."

"Every year thousands of cards of this class are undelivered and disposed of as waste," he warned.

4-Leaf Clover Brings Luck to Australian

NEWCASTLE, Australia—(U.P.)—Edward Healy, a Newcastle detective, wasn't taking any chances when he found a four-leaf clover. He bought a ticket in the New South Wales lottery.

TIP O' THE MORNING: One of the earliest sound-film hits, "The Jazz Singer," will be re-made with Danny Thomas in the Al Jolson role.

MURDER AND OTHER SINS, with the ghost of Sigmund Freud hovering over the scene, were the fare at the Wisconsin Union theater Tuesday night when Wisconsin Players opened a five-day run of "The Hunted"—central portion of the Eugene O'Neill trilogy, "Mourning Becomes Electra."

Marjorie Schaffer's magnetic portrayal of Christine Mannon, who killed her hero husband, and Ann Louise Resh's quiet but intense picture of their daughter made the story almost believable, but even they, and the other good factors of the production, could not keep its implications from seeming theatrically obvious.

The first act of this tragedy of human failings was a remarkable piece of writing—compact, honestly dramatic (with a bit of laughter for balance), and doubly strong because of its surprising brevity.

In a few short minutes, O'Neill drew clear pictures of his leading characters—including the murdered Ezra Mannon—and set the stage for the impending turmoil, mental and physical. It implanted a suspicion of Christine's guilt and faithlessness; a hint of her son, Orlin's, weakness of character; a suggestion of the strength and urge for vengeance in her daughter.

Director John Dietrich and his cast maintained the suspense and the suspicion through the second act with its Freudian overcast and harrowing accusations—but the melodramatic climaxes (two of which) of the last act destroyed much of the effect.

Miss Schaffer's performance was that of an actress thoroughly sold on her role, and capable of selling it to her audience with mobile face, a fascinatingly active and meaningful hands, and flexible toy is intended would also be helpful.

Members are invited to bring guests and the local as a whole has invited the group of young German trade unionists now attending the Industrial Management Center under the sponsorship of the U. S. State department and the university.

The Office Employees local includes membership from three all-union personnel offices as well as individuals from various small offices.

The three large offices represented are the Madison Gas and Electric Co., the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, and the Credit Union National Assn. The latter two have their international headquarters in Madison.

FIRE ALL AROUND ANSONIA, Conn. (U.P.)—Dashing from his house in response to a fire alarm in another part of the city, a volunteer fire captain, Edward Condon, found his own car in flames outside his door.
