Mass Services Set for Victims of Tijuana Fire

TIJUANA, Mex.—(U.P.)—Mass funeral services will be conducted late this week for 44 persons killed Sunday when fire swept the civic auditorium during a nativity party.

Plans for the mass service were not yet finished, but it was announced Tuesday it probably will be held either Thursday or Friday.

Thirteen of the dead still are unidentified. Most of them are children, and they are expected to be buried in a common grave.

Federal Dist. Atty. Fernando Castanon still is seeking Angel Fernandez, owner of the ruined building, to question him about a locked exit and other "fire hazards" in the structure.

Castanon has indicated he probably will file criminal charges in connection with the fire Thursday morning. He has not specified who will be charged or what the charge will be.

The fire broke out Sunday morning after the lighting system short-circuited on a Christmas tree that had been knocked over during a scuffle. More than 100 persons were burned and injured in the subsequent panic.

11 Orphaned Tots Go On with Their Usual Christmas

LEONARD, Mich. —(U.P.)— The Moore children went on with Christmas as usual Tuesday despite the absence of their parents, Murray and Mary Moore, who were killed in a traffic accident.

Jerry, 15, oldest of 11 orphaned brothers and sisters, did his best to make sure the holiday would be "just like Mom and Dad would want it."

He tucked his younger brothers and sisters in bed Monday night and lugged presents galore from obscure hiding places, piling them under a gaily decorated Christmas tree.

Among the gifts that poured in from all over the nation was a carload of toys from an anonymous benefactor in Ferndale, Mich. Included were bicycles for Jerry and 12-year-old Tom and a Christmas turkey.

But Jerry, who's been the "head of the house" since their parents died last November, shied away from master-minding the holiday dinner. He let Grandma Moore roast the turkey and had Grandpa Moore do the carving.

Jerry also gave up the idea of playing Santa Claus to the rest of the family.

"I'm too small and would have had to wear too many pillows," he said.

Before dinner, Jerry said a prayer. he said he's "been living with for six weeks now."

It was: "We thank thee, Lord, for these our blessings."

Leathernecks Give Blood to Fellow Fighters

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby

The day after Christmas is traditionally devoted to puzzles and riddles.

Many's the time I've spent hours trying to work out the puzzle of what to do with five bright green and yellow neckties with silk fringes.

In line with the tradition, here's a bridge riddle for you. When is a finesse not a finesse?

As today's hand shows, the answer is:

When it's a safety play.

When today's hand was played, West opened the queen of clubs, and South won with the ace.

Declarer drew three rounds of trumps and then began on the hearts.

After winning the first round of hearts with the king, South led a small heart. . . and took a finesse that was really a safety play.

In short, he finessed dummy's ten of hearts.

South wasn't a bit worried about losing this finesse.

If East had been able to produce the jack of hearts, there would have been only the nine and the eight of hearts still out.

Dummy could pick those up with the ace and queen, after which the six of hearts would also be good.

Those three heart tricks in dummy would furnish discards for South's losing spades.

As it happened, the ten of hearts won.

Now declarer could discard two spades on the ace and queen of hearts, assuring the slam contract. He could take the spade finesse thereafter to try for an overtrick, not caring greatly whether the finesse succeeded or failed.

If you think the safety play is just "fancy," see what happens if South puts up dummy's queen of hearts.

The suit fails to break, and now only one spade can be discarded. South must try the spade finesse, which loses, and he is left with nothing but vague regrets and a minus score of 100 points.

FEATURE: Alice in Wonderland.

TYPE: Leo Bunin's new English version—done with a cast made up chiefly of puppets—not to be confused with the current Walt Disney edition using animated cartoons or the movie that depended on the good, old-fashioned human being.

REVIEWER: Helen Matheson

COMMENT: Sorry, this still isn't the "Alice" or your own wonderous imagining.

This interpretation perhaps is a little more faithful to the story than Disney's and many of the characters are amusingly reminiscent of the Tenniel drawings.

But the production lacks the inspired creative imagination required to translated "Alice" into a new medium. And poor handling of the technical problems makes fantasy that should shimmer and flow limp instead, and stumble infuriatingly.

The picture begins with an attempt to identify the real-life inspirations of the story — Victoria, for the Queen of Hearts, and Oxford university officials as the White Rabbit and Cheshire Cat, for example. When the real story begins the action depends on well-conceived, poorly photographed puppets. Only Alice (portrayed by a girl who seems too mature for the role) is real.

There are some charming scenes —Alice's erratic growth and diminishing; the dormouse's drowsy "twinkle, twinkle, twinkle," the duchess' hectic household complete with red pepper, and the croquet game with the flamingos and hedgehogs.

But continuity is very poor; many sequenesc would baffle anyone unfamiliar with the book; interpolated songs aren't very tuneful; some of the production details seem quite irrational (why, for example, couldn't Alice really swim in that fine sea of tears?).

And the net effect is that of a good try that doesn't ever quite come off.

The only beer expert who matters is the one you see in your mirror

The taste of beer is a personal matter. No expert can tell you which brand you'll like best. It's something you have to find out for yourself.

That's why we brew Schlitz beer for the only beer expert who matters—the one you see in your mirror. We can't guarantee you'll like Schlitz best, but we can tell you this:

No beer in history has ever pleased so many people as Schlitz. That's why Schlitz is first in sales in the U.S.A.
