Folding Bed 'Mouse-Traps'

Rescuers strive to free Mrs. Stella Howard (left) and her daughter, Joan, as they lay trapped in a folding bed in their Los Angeles apartment. The whole thing started when the women thought they heard a mouse in a closet and decided to investigate.

A moment later, the bed began to act like a robot Machiavelli—it squeaked, rumbled and, with cunning finality, plopped its headboard down tight on their shoulders. Officers worked an hour to get them out. (International Soundphoto)

Commander A. J. Healy of the Iron Brigade Chapter No. 165 of the Military Order of the Purple Heart Monday night said his organization is open to suggestions for a Memorial Day main speaker.

Healy said most of the arrangements for a day-long celebration have been made, but so far no speaker has been found available.

Each year a different Madison veteran group is in charge of the Memorial Day arrangements.

Healy said such details as polishing 140 iron markers on graves of Confederate soldiers who died as prisoners in this area, have been arranged.

The Memorial Day program will begin at 9 a. m. with an hour long parade around the square, followed by the wreath ceremony at Main st.-Carroll st. Capitol Square corner, and the annual General Logan proclamation.

At noon the water ceremony will be held when an airplane will fly over Lake Monona and drop flowers. At 3 p. m. a tribute to the dead of every American war from the Revolution will be held in Forest Hill cemetery.

The students, Robert E. Kells, 21, Robert J. Pandt, 23, and John R. Clegg, 19, of 132 E. Resse terrace, and John J. Ottusch, 23, of 309 N. Frances st., were in the alley at the rear of Mrs. Richards' home looking for one of their fraternity pledges who lived there.

When police arrived, they suspected the students of being the prowlers Mrs. Richards had heard and arrested them on disorderly conduct charges. Superior Judge Roy H. Proctor dismissed the charges when the students denied they had been inside the house.

It was reported in Monday's State Journal that the students were arrested on suspicion of sneaking into Mrs. Richards' home.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

By Oswald Jacoby

"Please settle an argument," requests a New York reader.

"In the accompanying hand West won the first trick with the king of spades and continued with a low spade."

"South ruffed the ace of spades and realized that the ace of clubs was surely held by West."

"South therefore murmured that he would not give a nickel for his chances."

"South then proceeded to make his contract. He immediately cashed the ace and king of diamonds, and West unfortunately kept his queen of diamonds."

"Declarer next took the ace and king of hearts and ruffed dummy's last spade in his own hand."

"When South now led a third diamond, West was obliged to win. If West then led clubs, South would make his king. If West led anything else, South could ruff while dummy discarded a losing club. In either case South was sure to make his contract."

"East thought that a player who mark had caused that a player who announced that he couldn't make his contract should not be allowed to recover."

"Is East correct in his attitude?" East is not at all correct. South didn't say that he was not going to make his contract, he merely stated that he would not give a nickel for his chances—in other words that he didn't expect to make four hearts.

The odds were more than 12 to 1 against him when you consider that he needed a 2-2 trump break, and a 3-3 diamond break, with the queen of diamonds in the West hand.

I do not wonder that South felt discouraged over his prospects. Actually, East was the villain in this little drama.

The bidding and the dummy should have warned him that South had a singleton spade. Hence East should have played the ace of spades at the first trick in order to return a club.

This was East's only chance to lead and if he had used it properly he would have set the contract before any remark had been made.

SENATE TO INVESTIGATE BOOST IN NEWSPRINT

WASHINGTON — (U.P.) — Sen. Herbert R. O'Connor (D-Md.) Monday said his senate Judiciary subcommittee staff will investigate the new increase in Canadian newspaper prices.

O'Connor heads a five-man subcommittee on monopoly and anti-trust legislation.

O'Connor told the Senate the new 10-a-ton increase is a "drastic display of intent to cash in on the fact that America is so thoroughly dependent on its Canadian sources of newsprint supply."
