JOHN CROSBY'S COLUMN

Glamor Boy Turns on 700-Year-Old Charm

By JOHN CROSBY

NEW YORK, Jan. 30.—Renzo Cesana (pronounced Chasana, girls) is—it says here in a press release—the scion of a 700-year-old family, "fourth oldest family in Rome." (Sounds fishy to me. In Rome, 700 years is only yesterday. Must be a good many families a lot older than that but I'll play along.)

Mr. Cesana's 700-year-old charm, which has been bewitching several million California housewives for some months now, has been thoughtfully extended by the Columbia Broadcasting System into the boudoirs of most of the rest of the Nation, at least those on the co-axial cable. Renzo is quite a dish, all right, all right. His show is called "The Continental" (KPIX 11 p.m. PST Tuesdays and Thursdays) and it is awash with continental manner; it will without the slightest question win him the slavish devotion of an awful lot of dames; and it pushes television up to about the eminence radio enjoyed back in the days (1932) when Tony Wons was mooing gently about the virtues of thrift, motherhood and the home over the Columbia Broadcasting System.

Cesana deals in a rather different, not nearly so wholesome line of goods. I don't think motherhood is going to get much of a play. Dressed to the nines in Ascot tie, pearl gray vest, a monocle, Cesana pitches a sort of rarified woo straight at the camera, offering it cigarettes and champagne and bidding it to smile graciously on what I believe is called his suit. Meanwhile, millions of wives, whose husbands probably have stormed off in a huff to the nearest saloon to look at the wrestling, are conned into thinking this ancient Roman Malarkey is directly straight at them.

NO DISTRACTIONS

This is a triumph of vicarious emotion, something the girls are pretty good at, having managed for years to transform themselves into whatever shell happens to be lying in Robert Taylor's arms at the movies. Here there are no distractions like actresses getting in between them and the Great Lover.

"Don't be afraid, darleeng," he intones in a voice charged with sex and in accents reminiscent of the old pre-Shavian Charles Boyer. "Eet ees only a man's apartment." From there on the marlarkey gets thick as whalehide. Mr. Cesana—he was once a count, girls, in case titles interest you—will explain that a woman's smile is the most beautiful thing in the world. He gives every audience that he believes this which shows how different he is from you and me. (Most beautiful thing I ever saw, in case Mr. Cesana is interested, was a wad of $100 bills which outshone all the females in the neighborhood.)

From her smile, he passes on to other aspects of the female anatomy—her nose, for example, which, I gathered, he felt to be an infallible index of character. (Not in this country, Renzo. Noses are so extensively rearranged and modified over here that you can't tell a damn thing about a girl on the evidence of her nose.)

GIRLS GET A SHOCK

From time to time he interrupts the flow of boudoir philosophy and endearments long enough to hand the girl—which is to say the camera—a cigarette, a glass of champagne (guaranteed not to tickle the nose), or a rose. He has even threatened to kiss the camera but so far he hasn't, conceivably prevented by the union rules against monkeying with the equipment.

Somewhere about five minutes before closing time, the girls are all in for the shock of their lives. At this point, he starts to sell them Cameo stockings. Right there he reveals that his romantic urges are tempered by sordid commerce, that he's not a lover but a salesman. I consider this a serious flaw in his technique and one that no American, no matter how gauche the rest of his pitch, would ever commit.

Come to think of it, I don't think any American would have the courage to commit this program

Kate Smith Will Present 1951 TV Awards Tonight

By JAMES ABBE

Today may be recorded in TV history as "Kate Smith Day"—or at least noted in kindly Kate's scrap book. This is the day upon which her Monday through Friday (1 to 2 p.m. KRON-TV) show is to launch something new in television—filmed reports from wounded veterans in Korea and Japanese hospitals in which the veteran is seen sending his message back home.

Tonight on her weekly "Kate Smith Evening Hour" Kate will officiate on what, for a better name, we might call "plaque night." She will hand out plaques awarded to a lot of 1951 winners, including Sid Caesar and Imogene Coca, Milton Berle, Bob Hope, Fran and Ollie. One who became a nationwide television star without premeditation, Sen. Estes Kefauver of Crime Commission fame, will also be cited. One more whom you may have heard covering portions of the Rose Bowl and East-West games (and I thought very poorly), Jack Brickhouse.

GODFREY ON ICE

Tonight television puts Arthur Godfrey on ice along with the little Godfreys. If you've been listening to Godfrey on his radio program you will have had it impressed upon you that the entire Godfrey troupe has been taking ice skating lessons in preparation of tonight's event. The advance notice doesn't state whether there will be any decisions on the basis of "best two out of three falls," but if the show is on the level there certainly should be at least two or three falls.

Tonight at 6:30 on KNBC's radio, we get another slant on that issue of athletics and academic standing. "The Halls of Ivy" show provides us with a track star (presumably not on an athletic scholarship) who quits the college track team on the hunch that straight "A's" in his studies will serve him better (maybe in after-life?) than fleeting athletic fame. We are tipped off that the inner conflict results in a case of shingles for the conscientious student. While this specific problem might baffle you and me, we may be sure that Mr. and Mrs. Ronald Coleman as Ivy College president and wife, will solve the problem. Off-hand I cannot recall their coming out the losers in any of their bouts with such problems, which sometimes confront real life college heads.

PLEASES PARENT

I'm still following the University of California's Child Psychology TV program which Dr. Mary Cover Jones so ably conducts on KRON-TV Tuesdays and Thursdays at 10:45.

As interesting as Dr. Jones makes the course, this observer hopes she'll present more instead of fewer children to us.

The second of her programs with those three under-school-age samples and their charming mothers provided the best program to date. That is from the viewpoint of those like myself who want to see the program spread over the country.

Those three little girls on yesterday's program certainly did illustrate the point psychologist Dr. John McKee was making. Leaving it for us to identify the two sisters out of three pairs of disembodied sub-teen legs was fun. When we were finally shown the complete girls, it was also gratifying that we should have picked them correctly.

THEORY CONFIRMED

I am one parent who had consistently measured each of his children at the age of 2, and waited to see if that measurement represented one-half of his or her ultimate growth (and been laughed at). It pleased me that Dr. McKee more or less substantiated that theory when he said that girls are approximately half as tall as they'll ever be at 20 months, and boys at 26 months.

Perhaps on some later program they'll either confirm or dispute another one I picked up somewhere in the distant past. That the AVERAGE person has acquired approximately one-half of his or her vocabulary at the age of 3 years.

As for what's on the air tonight:

RADIO

6:30 P.M., KNBC—HALLS OF IVY. The troubles of a track star, who withdraws from the Ivy College team because he believes that straight "A's" in his studies are more important to him than athletics, are told in tonight's episode of Halls of Ivy.

8:30 P.M., KCBS—DR. CHRISTIAN. The prejudices and foibles of two generations cause dramatic complications in "Legacy of Hate."
